READING

FOR QUESTIONS 31 TO 35, READ THE PASSAGE AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS THAT FOLLOW.

-NASA

Pluto is a complex and mysterious world with mountains, valleys, plains, craters, and maybe glaciers. Discovered in 1930, Pluto was long considered our solar system's ninth planet. But after the discovery of similar intriguing worlds deeper in the distant Kuiper Belt, icy Pluto was reclassified as a dwarf planet.

Pluto is only about 1,400 miles wide. At that small size, Pluto is only about half the width of the United States. It's about 3.6 billion miles away from the Sun, and it has a thin atmosphere composed mostly of nitrogen, methane, and carbon monoxide. On average, Pluto's temperature is -387°F (-232°C), making it too cold to sustain life.

Pluto is orbited by five known moons, the largest of which is Charon. Charon is about half the size of Pluto itself, making it the largest satellite relative to the planet it orbits in our solar system. Pluto and Charon are often referred to as a "double planet".

Pluto is the only planet (so far) named by an 11-year-old girl. In 1930, Venetia Burney of Oxford, England, suggested her grandfather, that the new discovery be named for the Roman god of the underworld. He forwarded the name to the Lowell Observatory and it was selected.

Pluto's moons are named after other mythological figures associated with the underworld. Charon is named after the river Styx boatman who ferries souls in the underworld (as well as honouring Sharon, the wife of discoverer James Christy); Nix is named after the mother of Charon, who is also the goddess of darkness and night; Hydra is named for the nine-headed serpent that guards the underworld; Kerberos is named after the three-headed dog of Greek mythology (and called Fluffy in the Harry Potter novels), and Styx is named after the mythological river that separates the world of the living from the realm of the dead.

Pluto is about two-thirds the diameter of Earth's Moon and probably has a rocky core surrounded by a mantle of water ice.

Interesting ices like methane and nitrogen frost coat the surface. Due to its lower density, Pluto's mass is about one-sixth that of Earth's Moon.

Pluto has a thin, tenuous atmosphere that expands when it comes closer to the Sun and collapses as it moves farther away – similar to a comet. The main constituent is molecular nitrogen, though molecules of methane and carbon monoxide have also been detected.

When Pluto is close to the Sun, its surface ices sublimate (changing directly from solid to gas) and rise to temporarily form a thin atmosphere. Pluto's low gravity (about 6% of Earth's) causes the atmosphere to be much more extended in altitude than our planet's atmosphere. Pluto becomes much colder during the part of each year when it is travelling far away from the Sun. During this time, the bulk of the planet's atmosphere may freeze and fall as snow to the surface.

34. Pluto's moons are named after the mythological figures. Match the moon's names with the mythological figures.

Name	Mythological figure
(i) Charon	(a) three-headed dog of Greek mythology
(ii) Nix	(b) nine-headed serpent that guards the underworld
(iii) Hydra	(c) river that separates the world of living & dead
(iv) Kerberos	(d) the mother of Charon, goddess of darkness and night
(v) Styx	(e) the river Styx boatman who ferries souls in the underworld

- A. (i) - (e), (ii) - (d), (iii) - (b), (iv) - (a), (v) - (c)
B. (i) - (b), (ii) - (c), (iii) - (a), (iv) - (e), (v) - (d)
C. (i) - (d), (ii) - (b), (iii) - (c), (iv) - (a), (v) - (e)
D. (i) - (c), (ii) - (e), (iii) - (a), (iv) - (d), (v) - (b)

31. Choose the suitable title for the given passage.

- A. Pluto : The Dwarf Planet-An Overview
B. The Solar System
C. The Kuiper Belt
D. Pluto's Life

32. Who was responsible for naming the planet as 'Pluto'?

- A. Sharon
B. James Christy
C. Venetia Burney
D. Harry Potter

33. Select the incorrect statement.

- A. Pluto is only about 1,400 miles wide.
B. It is about 3.6 billion miles away from the Sun.
C. Its atmosphere has oxygen and nitrogen.
D. Its temperature is -387°F (-232°C).

35. Interesting ices like _____ and _____ frost coat the surface of Pluto.

- A. oxygen, helium
B. carbon, ammonia
C. methane, nitrogen
D. nitrogen, oxygen

FOR QUESTIONS 36 TO 40, READ THE PASSAGE AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS THAT FOLLOW.

It's a shop I must have walked past a million times before, but have barely noticed until now, and have never thought to enter. A nondescript, little, drab brown brick building, crammed between a hair salon and an upholstery store, with a tiny window display offering an assortment of forgettable items that are of no interest to me. But I have some extra time on my hands today and decide to take a quick peek.

The interior is cool and dark, and it takes a moment for my eyes to adjust. An overpowering rose scent hangs thickly in the air; nearly enough to turn me away. Instead I continue further into the store, eyes scanning the shelves for anything interesting. Indeed, there are a great variety of items – and yet none whatsoever appeal to me.

“Can I help you?”

I look up to see an elderly woman behind a counter. She looks vaguely startled, and I wonder when she last saw a customer enter her shop.

“Just browsing,” I reply.

I make a full circle of the place and confirm that there is indeed nothing here that I wish to purchase. I wonder how the old woman manages to stay in business. I head towards the door, but pause when I notice one interesting item. A large old book, perched on a wooden stand.

There is no visible title on the well-worn leather cover, and it is held shut with a thick metal clasp. Upon further inspection I see that a combination lock is affixed to the clasp.

The numbers read: 02-11-32.

I try the latch with the current combination, but it does not open. I am now even more curious to discover what lies between the book’s pages. “What is this book about?” I ask the old woman, who has been staring at me quietly the whole time. “Do you know the combination?”

“I do,” the woman replies, but adds nothing more.

I am annoyed by her response, and decide that I’ve had enough of this place. I turn to leave and am almost out the door, when I hear the woman say, “Try your birthday.”

I give her an odd look as I wander back over to the book. She’s crazy, I think. And yet, I am compelled. With my index finger I swipe the numbers into place so that they now show my birth month, day, and year.

To my astonishment, the latch clicks open. I pull back the heavy cover and flip through the pages. “This can’t be right,” I murmur in shock as I realize the book is a biography... about me!

I look up to question the woman, but she is gone and the shop suddenly seems different, brighter. The shelves are now stocked with all my favourite things. I wander through the aisles again – how did I miss this before? And this? I would buy any of these items, gladly!

Gone is the cloying fragrance of rose, replaced with my own favorite scent.

I sit behind the counter and wait for a customer to come in and buy something, but they all walk past the window as though the place were invisible. The few that do enter seem uninterested in what I have to sell, or complain that the fragrance in the air is too strong.

Until one day, a young woman takes an interest in the book. “It won’t open,” she notes, smacking on her gum.

“Try your birthday,” I say.
