SUMMARY

The story 'Of Magic Lamp and Genies' is written by Mark Twain. In this, Huck and his friends played a game in which they pretended to be robbers. Once, Tom pretended that a caravan of Arabs and Spaniards was going to camp nearby with hundreds of camels and elephants. It turned out to be a Sunday-school picnic, although Tom explained that it really was a caravan of Arabs and Spaniards—only they were enchanted, like in Don Quixote. The raid on the picnic got the boys only a few doughnuts and jam but a fair amount of trouble. After testing another of Tom's theories by rubbing old lamps and rings but failing to summon a genie, Huck concluded that most of Tom's stories have been "lies".
