Summary

The story 'Rama to the Rescue' is an interesting comic strip which tells us about the witty couple who were clever enough to get rid of the thief. One night in the village, a man returns from work to his home, only to find his wife listening quietly to the voices outside. She even tells her husband to be quiet and listen to the voices. To his surprise, a thief has already entered. He tells his wife to lie down and immediately plans a way to call Rama, the kotwal of the village.

The thief tried to listen to their conversation, hoping they would talk about the money, but they were busy playing their silly game. The wife asked her husband what would be the name of their child. He told her that they should name him Rama. The man then asked his wife what she would do if their child would be in the yard. His wife said she would softly call out to him, 'Rama!'.

Her husband then kept extending the area where their child could be, to call out the Kotwal Rama to his home. Eventually, Kotwal Rama heard her voice and arrested the thief. It was her husband's cleverness that the thief got arrested without even the thief doubting them.
